Feathers and Fur the Favorites of the Frivolous Fair.

Toques, Jackets, Coats and Capes - The sable Tail Decoration and the Fur and Velvet Combinations-Football Gowns.

COPYRIGHT 1895. What we used to call the three-quarter length cont, only two years ago, hardly exists now. Practically, there are three lengths for the winter cloaks. First of all, the jacket, coming only to the waist, often of scalskin and always provided with enormous sleeves; then the short sucque, double breasted as a rule, huge sleeves and made of chinchilia or some rough hairy cloth, with full but short basque effect at the waist; and then there is the long clouk. But where the jacket and sacque admit of little variety in shape, the long cloak is infinite in its variety, from the loose and lace-decked opera wrap to the snug and military-looking cont. broud-braided and big-buttoned and flapping at the skirt, clad wherewith a modern incroyable strode down Broadway about matinee time the other afternoon. The hat she were was that style called in Paris Larochejacquenat, with Dresden ribbon trimming and huge ostrich plumes. And her tie of muil was as enormous as those I saw worn by the negro minstrels on Ascot day years ago. Only then we were expected to be amused, now to admire. By all odds the most popular vestment of the season is the sack cont in chinchilla or rough cloth, coming bareiy to the hips; and for the very good reason that it is not immoderately expensive. A better reason commends it. Less short as it is, it weighs enough for have never been sold at less than 25c a a woman to carry. The long wraps we see with their freighted argosies of fur and their silken luxuries of linings are a load for Sandow.

Then there are the capes, and in these fashion in the new world shows its eclecticism. Driving capes are from gets, bedraggled in the mud and stirs

As to muffs-well, if expense is no obfur, to match the short walking jacket, and a huge one of fur, or velvet or satin edged with fur, to match her long and luxurious carriage robe. Of course, the muff is one of the most indefensible articles of feminine wear, but-

One of the distinctive features of the season's dressing is its use of fur and velvet and silk and cloth in combination for the fashioning of gowns. A recent walking costume consists of nut-brown smooth-faced cloth, the bodice decked with a deep yoke formed of alternate strips of fur and emerald green velvet. The high coliar is bordered with fur, and so are the cuffs of the velvet sleeves

This use of the taus or purry | the figured velvet in the sleeves, which beasts is not yet common in New York, | terminate in the fur-trimmed cuffs of the green cloth.
